The Dalton Boys were born into a poor family in Missouri, and they grew up in a rough and tumble environment. Their father was a farmer and their mother was a devout Christian. The boys were raised to be hard-working and self-reliant, but they also had a rebellious streak. As teenagers, they began to get into trouble with the law, and they were eventually forced to leave home.

The Dalton Boys eventually made their way to Indian Territory, where they joined up with a group of outlaws led by Jesse James. James was one of the most famous outlaws in the West, and he took the Dalton Boys under his wing. He taught them how to rob banks and trains, and he also showed them how to avoid capture.

In 1892, the Dalton Boys decided to strike out on their own. They robbed a bank in Coffeyville, Kansas, but the robbery went awry and the gang was forced to flee. They were eventually surrounded by law enforcement, and they were all killed in a shootout.

The Dalton Boys were one of the most notorious gangs in the American West. They were known for their daring robberies and their shootouts with law enforcement. The gang was eventually killed in a shootout, but their legend lives on.
