In the heart of a vast and enchanting forest, there lived a gentle and solitary bear named Ursa Major. Ursa Major made his home in a cozy den nestled within a towering oak tree. The den was spacious, with plenty of room for Ursa Major to rest and hibernate during the long winter months.

But there was one thing missing from Ursa Major's den: a door. Ursa Major had always dreamed of having a door for his den. A door would keep out the cold winter winds and the rain. It would also give Ursa Major a sense of security and privacy.

One day, Ursa Major decided that he would no longer go without a door. He set out into the forest in search of help. He asked all the animals he met, but none of them could help him. Some of the animals laughed at Ursa Major's request. They had never heard of a bear who wanted a door for his den.

Ursa Major was starting to lose hope when he came across a wise old owl. The owl listened to Ursa Major's story and understood his need for a door. The owl thought for a moment and then said, "I know someone who can help you, Ursa Major. His name is Mr. Badger. He is a skilled woodworker and he lives just over the next hill."

Ursa Major thanked the owl and hurried over the next hill. He soon came to Mr. Badger's house. Ursa Major knocked on the door and Mr. Badger answered. Ursa Major explained his need for a door to Mr. Badger. Mr. Badger listened patiently and then said, "I would be happy to help you, Ursa Major. I have some leftover wood from a project I recently finished. I can use that to make you a door for your den."

Ursa Major was overjoyed. He thanked Mr. Badger profusely. Mr. Badger got to work right away. He cut and measured the wood and soon had a beautiful door for Ursa Major's den. Ursa Major was so grateful to Mr. Badger. He gave Mr. Badger a big hug and then carried the door back to his den.

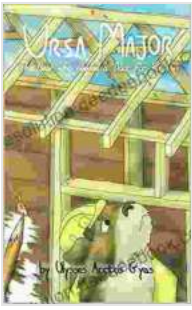

Ursa Major wasted no time in installing the door. He was so happy to finally have a door for his den. The door kept out the cold winter winds and the rain. It also gave Ursa Major a sense of security and privacy. Ursa Major was so grateful to Mr. Badger for helping him. He knew that he had made a friend for life.

From that day on, Ursa Major lived happily in his den with his new door. He was no longer afraid of the cold winter winds or the rain. He was also no longer lonely. He had made a new friend in Mr. Badger. Ursa Major's story is a reminder that we should never give up on our dreams. No matter how big or small our dreams may seem, we should never stop believing that they can come true. We should also never be afraid to ask for help from others. There are always people who are willing to help us achieve our goals.
