In 1875, renowned landscape architect Frederick Law Olmsted envisioned a charming rustic mill within the park's tranquil setting. Inspired by the Vaux meticulously designed the mill, paying homage to the French Renaissance style. Constructed from rusticated Manhattan schist, the mill exudes an aura of timeless elegance.

Over the years, the mill has served various purposes. Initially conceived as a maintenance building, it later became a popular destination for picnicking and leisure activities.

In the early 20th century, the mill gained its iconic "French Letters" moniker due to its proximity to a nearby outhouse inscribed with the French phrase "Lettres Francaises." This curious anecdote has added to the mill's allure and mystique.
